

Insurances you may have via your work

As a wage-earner at a private company without collective agreements, you will normally be covered by the collective insurances. This is extra insurance cover that gives you and your family added financial security. These insurances are compulsory for companies with collective agreements, but can also be signed by employers without collective agreements. Employers pay the premiums.

This information sheet gives you a brief description of the collective insurances. More information, including the full terms & conditions, can be found on the Fora and AFA Försäkring websites.

In the event of sickness, work injury or if you have pregnancy benefit, Waiver of Premium Insurance will pay your SAF-LO Collective Pension Insurance premium instead of your employer in certain cases.
